HENRY HARRIS.

Henry Harris passed away at his home, 5 Swan place, Sunday last, the cause of his death being heart disease. The deceased was 73 years of age and had been ill about seven weeks. The funeral was held at the house Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. James Yeames of St. John's church having charge of the service. The burial was in the family lot at Mount Auburn.

MRS. THEODORE SCHWAMB.

The death of Mrs. Theodore Schwamb occurred at her late home, 1171 Massachusetts avenue, last week Friday. Mrs. Schwamb was born March 17, 1830, and she was therefore 72 years of age at the time of her decease. She is survived by her husband, a son, Peter Schwamb, professor at Tech. and daughter, Mrs. Walter H. Peirce, and five grandchildren. The funeral services were held at her late home at 2.30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The burial, at Mount Auburn, was private.

NO SOLUTION.

No solution has been found, to date of writing, of the mystery in the murder of James H. Fermoy. Ed. McDonald, the much wanted man of last week, was found and interviewed by the police officials, with the result that the police became convinced that he had nothing at all to do with the case, having proved a satisfactory alibi. The affair is, then, left where it was at the beginning, with an unknown stranger, described by various persons, much sought for and little found. It would seem that the police departments of Boston and Cambridge have been more interested in shifting the responsibility to each other's shoulders than in seriously attempting to solve the problem.

BROWN TAIL BUNCO.

The villainous brown tail has redoubled its villainies by lending itself to the nefarious schemes of the bunco-man. Thursday morning two North Cambridge young men were haled to the police station by Officer Duffy. They were charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, and it is reported that they have succeeded in beguiling considerable money in the past few weeks from the pockets of unsuspecting residents of Arlington and neighboring towns. Representing themselves sometimes as employees of the Metropolitan park commission and at others as employees of a local forger, they have gone about making fake attempts at the destruction of the brown tail and gypsy moth pests wherever they could find a credulous customer. They have, moreover, charged high prices for the worthless stuff they have used on the trees. In order to make a show of authority one of the two wore a badge similar to those used by park employees, which badge on close inspection is seen to bear the following inscription: "Brown tail and gypsy moths, apple and pear trees: private work." Many complaints have been made to the police with regard to them, and, in fact, at the time they were caught they were upon the point of collecting some five dollars from the wife of a prominent townsman.

During a short conference with Acting Chief Hooley and Officer Duffy in the station, the two young men were advised to take passage upon a homeward bound car, and this they immediately did, promising "never to do so any more." The badge has been held as a souvenir at the police station.

Beauty Spots in Hoosac Valley.

Of the many popular summer grounds and interesting sections reached by rail from Boston, that portion of Massachusetts known as the "Hoosac Country and Deerfield Valley" stands pre-eminent.

A beautiful section of country with a delightful river watering the green fields and freshening the verdure, the Hoosac river lends a charm to the other attractions of this valley.

The many historically celebrated spots, which have been praised and admired by Longfellow and Hawthorne, are another interesting feature but the main beauty and prime attraction of this justly celebrated region, is the forest covered hills, "The Berkshires."

Here may also be seen the monster "Hoosac Tunnel," which is cut through the massive walls of the mountain rock.

Send two cents in stamps to the general passenger department, Boston & Maine railroad, Boston, for their illustrated and descriptive book "Hoosac Country and Deerfield Valley," which describes in detail the wonders of this region.

America's Grand Spa and Famous Resort, Saratoga Springs.

Midsummer is at hand, and the vacation season at the many summer watering resorts is now at its height, especially is this so of Saratoga, the grandest, the most refreshing and the greatest of all American summer haunts.

The cooling springs are gushing forth with their supply of beautiful mineral water; the pleasant parks are bedecked with all their summer glory; the magnificent and palatial hotels are a scene of never-ending life and gaiety, while from the large verandas and spacious halls floats the pleasant strains of delightful music. And the nearby lake now presents an ideal picture, situated as it is in a valley with receding hills on both sides, a clear, blue sheet of water with a surface dotted here and there with boats and yachts.

The famous race track is a scene of animation and enthusiasm, here are the millionaire followers of the race tracks, the pick of the country, the fastest of horses and always intense interest. Here one can view a typical American race track scene, and the greatest sport in the country with a first-class patronage.

At this particular season of the year, Saratoga is alone, she distances all rivals and has enjoyment galore.

Saratoga can be reached from Boston via the Boston & Maine railroad, which runs through cars from Boston via the Fitchburg division.

The English farmer used to be proud of his smock, and it was often adorned with much beautiful work, and was worth from £20 to £30, but now according to Country Life, the garment is almost wholly discarded. No farmer wears it, and even the farm laborer objects to it in its cheaper form, though here and there in out-of-the-way hamlets of the Berkshire and Wiltshire Downs the rustic may occasionally be seen clad according to the old fashion. This is but seldom, however, as the cheap tailor has long been familiar in Arcadia, and the rural swain goes in the same attire as the city beau.

A good resolution should never be laid on the table.

Newport in Summer

NEWPORT has put on her garments of gladness for her summer of roses and wine. There is an exhilaration about Newport in summer which is found nowhere else. Besides the brightness of the sparkling ever-flashing sea, the blueness of the sky shot with sunlight, "like a great vault of lapis lazuli flecked with gold," and the air mingled with the breaths of ocean and green fields, to inhale which is like drinking a very dry champagne, there is the greater exhilaration of thousands of people all bent on having a good time and doing it on a grand and generous scale, regardless of expense.

The only Newport society the great world knows is the rich society of the summer. It is a most difficult one to "arrive" in. Many folk, after spending any amount of money, have given up the attempt after a few seasons and gone elsewhere to spend their summers. The favorite entrance into its inner circles for those who are not born there is by way of London, but even that path is not so sure of leading to the goal as it used to be. The colony is divided into strata. Entrance into the higher one depends for one thing upon how long a family has made Newport its summer home. Newport ceased to exist as a great commercial port with the revolutionary war. Then, in the '40's, the wealthy southern discovered it and each summer saw them assembled there in force with their best of everything in clothing and slaves, horses and carriages. A great deal of dignity and not a little magnificence in its way attached to the "afo' de wah" society of the south which used to assemble in Newport. The predominant society of the place always has been given to doing things on a grand scale—there is something in the air and his guests ate heartily and drank heavily, after the manner of those times, while the burning house was the torch which lighted their revels.

Such tales as this and stories of the French occupation during the war of the revolution are dear to the hearts of the oldest old society of Newport. They like to tell of the Quaker maiden who fell in love at first sight with Rochambeau and threw a rose at his feet as he passed down over the hill riding with Washington. The ghost of the maiden, dust and ashes so and the sunshine "tangled in the fringes of the sea" which makes one want to glow and glitter as much as he can.

Even that old colonial society, the faded remnants of which are now so lusterless and prim, was gaudy and brilliant in its day. Could any feast of the old slave-holding aristocracy, or of their successors, the "captains of industry," exceed in the free magnificence of its setting forth the dinner given by old Col. Geoffrey Malbone at his seat of Malbone Hall? When the tables were spread and the guests assembled the house was discovered to be on fire. The doughty old colonel ordered the tables to be removed to the lawn, and there he many years, still haunts one of the Newport houses. Bret Harte makes his spirit come back as a "faint sweet odor of mignonette"; but the older story is that of a rose.

Harte wrote his "Newport Legend" tectural monstrosities which were perpetrated for rich men in the '60's and '70's in all parts of the country have their representatives at Newport, but the millionaire of today knows a thing or two about art and architecture and is able to pick out a competent architect to construct his villa.

Of late the Newport colony has been going in for landscape gardening, Italian gardens and such adjunct to their villas. And this is a good

Dear Enterprise—That man gets the most out of his vacation who makes no definite plan for it. A summer's outing finds its highest enjoyment in letting things drift as they may. There is a decided pleasure in not knowing what is to come next. Then is one in a constant state of uncertain expectancy. The very moment one marks out a definite outline where he is to go and what he is to do during the heated term, then at that very moment he makes hard work of what should be a long pleasant summer day. The term "vacation" literally defined, means nothing other than a vacuum. So never think of packing your big trunk and getting ready for your trip into the country, but just take your gripsack in hand and go, never standing on the order of your going. This is the way we started out from the Enterprise office on Friday of last week. The day was one of a muggy, sultry atmosphere, so that we were only too glad to face northward. The Boston & Maine railroad soon brought us into a region of lower temperature, and where "general humidity" seldom makes his appearance. It is not a little surprising how one grows in grace as he comes within sight of the majestic heights the virtues begin to multiply. In our journey hither we ran into one of the most brilliant electrical storms that is rarely seen. We saw the storm in the distance approaching us, while our train did its best in meeting it halfway, and surely we did meet it. The vivid lightnings and the crashing thunder gave startling and effective evidence of its presence. The rain came down in torrents, while the heavens were all aglow with the forked lightning. The scene was simply magnificent and indescribable. When we reached West Ossipee at 5.30 p. m. the skies had cleared, so that our ride by carriage to Kinderheim, a distance of 18 miles, was delightfully cool and refreshing. The mountains as we approached them stood out in bold relief. On reaching Kinderheim we found a blazing fire in the big fireplace, to give us greeting. We do not purpose at this writing to again repeat our description of these mountains, for Arlington must now well know of our attractive surroundings. It is enough that we are always peacefully at rest in this out-of-the-way locality. We love these solitudes. We are always glad to get apart occasionally from men and women, that we may more closely get in touch with nature. Not that we dislike men and women, but that we more greatly love nature at first hand. And here is found the striking difference between the sea and the mountains. The sea is grand and we love it, yet at the shore are found crowds of human beings, while in the more sparsely settled districts of the mountains one may be comparatively alone. Meeting Mr. Tuttle of the school committee on a recent Friday morning, as he was leaving his Arlington home for Diamond Island in Maine, where he and his family have their pleasant summer residence, he said to us substantially as follows: "I am going to my summer home on Diamond Island to spend Sunday with my family, a locality one of the most attractive and pleasant to be found. Why," said he, "we have only some 70 or 75 of the choicest families in near neighborhood, while we are in ready road of the store, the post office, the doctor and the church, and always within sound of Old Ocean's roar, so that little or nothing more is desired for a summer home." In answer we replied we do not doubt or discount the many attractions of Diamond Island, but we added, "let us tell you of our summer home at Kinderheim: We have only two families nearer than a mile to us, while we are three and a half miles from a store, three miles and a half from the post office, nearly four miles from a church, and five miles from a physician. Instead of the store," we said, "we have a garden of growing vegetables, instead of 75 choice families we have the choicest companionship of nature, instead of the physician we have the clearest skies, with the most refreshing atmosphere, and the purest of living waters, and instead of the church we have a temple no made with hands in which all may worship. Give us the mountains," we added, "in preference to the sea. Everywhere in the sacred writings are the mountains enthusiastically mentioned. John says in his vision on the Isle of Patmos, 'and there shall be no more sea,' while other writers of the Bible shout in joyous acclaim, 'Blessed be a bird to your mountain,' and 'shout upon the top of the mountain,' and so on. Let others sing the praises of the sea—we shall continue our joyful song of the mountain."

WILSON PALMER.

There seems to be need of a term to designate the new terrors of our streets, those speed-crazed paranoias who are now doing so much to bring the automobile into disrepute, asserts the Horseless Age. Various terms are loosely applied, but a new compound would be desirable. We suggest the word "auto-maniac," which is harmony with several well-known words of Greek derivation already rooted in the language as descriptive of victims of diseased and abnormal appetite (dipsomania, kleptomania), and conveys a strong and true picture of the mental state of the worst of these offenders against law and decency.

Presidents in Rented Houses

THIS is not the first time that a President of the United States has been obliged to occupy temporary quarters on account of repairs at the White House. Such a thing occurred at the beginning of Mr. Arthur's administration when, Garfield having died, the Executive Mansion was put through an elaborate course of renovation, the new Chief Magistrate meanwhile taking up his residence in the big house on Capitol Hill which had been built by Gen. B. F. Butler. This building, now tenanted by the Marine Hospital Service, came in those days to be known as the Gray House.

Perhaps the most famous of all dwellings serving as temporary homes of Presidents is the Octagon House. This picturesque old residence was used by Madison as Executive Mansion after the British had burned the White House. It was here that the celebrated beauty Dolly Madison held her court. In August, 1813, a party of invited guests were sitting down to a banquet in the state dining room of the White House, when a troop of British soldiers burst in and set fire to the building. The fire made small headway, as a drizzling rain was falling, and soon went out. However, on the next day, it was rekindled by the British, doing serious damage, so much, in fact, as to make the mansion uninhabitable. The Madisons fled.

The next year, 1814, they established their household in the Octagon House, and it became popularly known as the "Annex Executive Mansion." This old residence is of queer shape, being eight-sided, as its name suggests. It has a fascinating round room on the second floor over the front door, which Dolly Madison used as her boudoir. The dwelling has three stories and a basement, and was allowed to fall into decay, having been empty for a number of years, until comparatively recently, when it was put in perfect repair. It is now used for offices, being in a most convenient situation, at the corner of New York avenue and Eighteenth street, only one block away from the War, State and Navy departments.

President Madison occupied the Octagon House until the close of his administration on March 4, 1817. President Monroe also lived in this historic dwelling during the first year of his term. At the end of that period he moved back into the White House which had been repaired and reconstructed and was again ready for habitation. It had been coated with white paint from roof to foundation, and got its name from that fact.

The reason the Octagon House remained uninhabited for many years was because it was reported to be haunted. Many ghosts were said to walk recklessly through the rooms. One of the stories was that great banquets were held every night in the dining room where the lovely Dolly had entertained so delightfully. Another was of a slave who moaned and cried at intervals in a most blood-curdling way, having been put to death by a cruel master. There was also a cat who roamed up stairs and down. In fact, nobody could be persuaded to live in the dwelling for love or money.

Several of the Presidents, including Arthur, Grant and Lincoln, spent a considerable part of their time each year at what is known as the "Presidential Cottage," at the Soldiers' Home in Washington. In the spring, when the city became warm, they would move out of this pretty house, which is situated in an ideal spot, the "Home" being simply a most beautifully kept park.

Another President who moved out of the White House so that it might be renovated was Mr. Buchanan. He occupied a suite of rooms at the National Hotel, on the second floor, and facing Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street, as his temporary quarters. It was while he was staying at this hostelry that some of the guests were accidentally poisoned.

The Cat Columns.

One of the features in which English periodicals for women differ from American magazines of the same class is in the "cat column." There is a section devoted to cat gossip in many of them, in which well known catteries are described, the good points of their inmates and the methods of their owners set forth, and the troubles of correspondents discussed, all with an unconscious gravity and a dignity of style which approach the humorous in American eyes. The illness and consequent absence from a show of a famous cat is thus gravely chronicled in a recent publication: "She was prevented from appearing at Edinburgh by an unfortunate accident, having got a fishbone firmly fixed in her nose while eating her supper. She has got well over the effects, barring a slight weakness of the eyes, which will, no doubt, pass off in a day or two."

$1000 FOR A MAN.

It seems that Jerry Logan, an aged negro, who for some years has been janitor of the state supreme court in Tennessee, has sold himself to the clerk of the court for $1000 giving a written contract to serve and obey the said clerk from now until the day of his death. Well what of it? There is many a white man here at the north sells himself for a less sum, so there is nothing surprising after all about this reported sale, unless it be that the negro in question wanted to pay his honest debts. Men are continually selling themselves even for less than the scriptural mess of pottage. Just look at our national congress and see the disgraceful sales that are there being made almost daily under the guise of public interest! In this instance the lobbyist is usually the purchaser, and if she be a woman she seldom or never fails to accomplish her purpose. There is not a little truth in the saying that "everybody has his price." Many a man, north as well as south, sells himself to satisfy some petty ambition. It has been known before now, in the history of newspaperdom, where some journalist has sold himself that he might keep his sails set to the popular current. That man who dodges the truth on any question of public importance does nothing other than sell himself. Many a man and many a woman, too, has bartered away their souls and bodies that they might gain some fancied, temporary good. No, no, the negro down south who has sold himself for $1000 is not so rare an exception as at first might be supposed to this traffic in men and women. The highest bidder will usually get his man. Still there are noble exceptions to this statement. Charles Sumner was not a purchasable commodity, neither was Wendell Phillips, nor is Senator Hoar of Worcester, nor Representative McCall of Winchester. There are some men who cannot be bought, and here in lies the hope of humanity.

WHAT WOULD THEY SAY?

What would the women of our town say if some of their sex were to become conductors on the electric? And yet this is just what some of the women are, in Chillicothe, Ohio, and it must not be forgotten that Chillicothe is an up-to-date city. In different portions of the country women are representing almost every department of industrial life. It is largely thought here in New England that women are kept in the background. It is true that in Massachusetts women can vote upon questions having to do with the public schools, but upon other matters of public importance they must remain silent. Federated Australia has just enfranchised her 800,000 women. The suffrage bill recently enacted into law by both houses of the Australian parliament places the ballot in the hands of the women of New South Wales, South Australia, Victoria, East Australia and Tasmania. This is as though American women in every state in the Union should be empowered to vote for president, and members of congress, and be made eligible to be elected to any of these positions. And yet America is the boasted "home of the free and the land of the brave." This country has a long step to take forward before it catches up.

The other day as D. C. Misner was passing the Dillsboro (Ind.) Bank he saw upon the sidewalk what he thought was a snake about a yard in length and of a peculiar color. He struck at the supposed reptile with his walking stick, and was surprised when the "snake" parted in twain. Upon examination it was ascertained that the peculiar-looking object was made up of myriads of small, wiry worms, each about an inch in length. The mass was formed exactly like a snake and was moving along about as rapidly as a snake. Later in the day Mrs. Sarah Ketcham, residing north of the town, found a similar mass of wriggling worms in her dooryard.

CHINESE TREE CULTURE.

Deformed and Warped Specimens in the Forbidden City.

"Queer, aren't they?" said one of the party as they noticed the tree in the illustration. "Who's queer?" asked the little man with the short legs and large head. "The Chinese." "Why?" "Look at that tree."

The tree was of special interest to the little man, as he was collecting information about all kinds of queer growths of Chinese trees and flowers. "Not so queer, just Chinesey," he replied.

The tree is an ordinary evergreen. It had been split up from the root about six feet when a small sapling, the roots having been carefully divided, and thus planted in front of the temple. The two halves were placed three feet apart, each having the same curve to the place where they joined, from which point it grew in its natural form. It was placed directly in front of the door of the temple, between the door and the gate of the court, 10 feet from the gate and 30 feet from the door, as though it was designed that the worshipper would pass through the tree before entering the temple.

Thus far we have discovered only six of these trees. Four are in the north end of the Forbidden City, in front of two of the temples. The one referred to is before the temple in the winter palace, where Count von Walderssee's troops were stationed, and the third is in a similar position in the summer palace. Whether this particular kind of tree is confined to imperial grounds we cannot say, but thus far we have seen none in other localities.

The Chinese are fond of wrapping or braiding two, three or four sprouts of a tree together and allowing them to grow in that form. In the campus of the Pekin university there was a species of locust, which they call the Hual Shu, and which, by the way, is the best shade tree of north China, the two sprouts of which had been wrapped together when small, and when sawed down by the Boxers they were each six inches in diameter.

Only a short distance from where the writer is now sitting is an apricot tree on which is an abundance of fruit. It consists of four sprouts which have been neatly formed into a braid and have continued to grow, until they are each three inches in diameter. A favorite decoration for lawns or courts is made from this locust. The top of the tree is cut off and the root of another the same size grafted thereon. The roots thus become branches, which grow downward instead of upward, and are covered with a dense foliage. This species of shrub is very common and familiar to all landscape gardeners.

Perhaps the most attractive specimen of Chinese plant cultivation is the grafting of the chrysanthemum. They have a large common weed called hao tao. In the early summer they cut the branches of this weed and in the place of each branch, as well as in the top, they graft a chrysanthemum stalk. The root of this weed is much stronger than the root of the flower, so that when they bloom the flowers are double as large as the ordinary chrysanthemum, and in addition to this extra luxuriance of blossom all varieties of color appear on the same stalk. Blooming as they do in mid-winter, they are very attractive.

It goes without saying that a people who thus understand the grafting of flowers are not ignorant of any of the processes of budding, grafting or crossing fruit; as a result we are able to obtain very fine specimens, especially of the peach.—Scientific American.

Work of Chinese Girls.

It is natural to infer that we see the worst side of a man when his temper gets the better of him.

The old custom of giving a purse to the bride at a wedding is still observed in an odd fashion in parts of Cumberland, England. The bridegroom provides himself with a number of gold and silver pieces, and, at the words, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," hands the clergyman his fee and pours the other coins into a handkerchief held by the bride. In other places the bride asks her husband for a gift of money or property on the day after the wedding, and this request he is bound in honor to grant.

FROM BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

The Castle Square Theatre stock company will end its summer season, at Boston Music Hall the coming week with a production of W. S. Gilbert's mythological comedy, in three acts, "Pygmalion and Galatea," thus giving a brilliant finish to the remarkably successful series of performances which has so delighted the patrons of the company during its temporary absence from the home stage. Gilbert's unique treatment of the story of the statue, and its sculptor, created a sensation in the theatrical world when first seen at the London Haymarket, in 1871, and its success, with W. H. Kendal as Pygmalion and Miss M. Robertson as Galatea, quickly made the play talked about on both sides of the Atlantic. The scene is in the studio of Pygmalion, the ancient customs and modern ideas are juggled with by the author in his usual clever way. The characters have been assigned as follows in the coming production:

Pygmalion, Hallett Thompson
Leucippe, Edmund Breece
Chrysoe, John T. Craven Agamemnon, Edward Wade
Mimos, William J. Hasson
Galatea, Mary Hall
Cynisca, Jane Irving
Daphne, Fanny Addison-Pitt Myrine, Katherine Clinton

The box offices at the theatre and Music Hall Place will be open on Monday, the 25th inst., at 9 o'clock for the sale of seats for the first week of the sixth regular fall and winter season of the Castle Square Company, which begins on Monday, Sept. 1st. There will be no change in the scale of prices. The attraction for the week beginning Monday, Sept. 1st, will be "As You Like It."

Liberty in business, with a free competition, will encourage enterprise, but we are coming to a time when competition is lost and combination is taking its place. In politics, we are coming to the time when liberty leads to a compromise between conflicting self-interests at the expense of the community.—Arthur T. Hadley.

The Empty Nest

There was a time in years gone by,
When I played as my feet, while I, Held one upon my knee;
The house was filled all day with noise,
The floor was scattered o'er with toys, My head ached wearily.

There came a time my house was still,
No mud-stained footprints on the sill, My longed-for time of rest, My boys had climbed youth's topmost stair,
My girl, a maiden tall and fair, Another's home now blest.

A last year's nest hangs on the bough,
'Twas filled with singing birds, but now It empty is and bare.
The buds and bees have come, but still Those birds come not again, to fill With song the silent air.

I gaze upon that empty nest,
I know God's ways are always best,
But I am sad and lone;
I long for life's vanished joys,
My wee girl and my bonny boys, My nestlings that have flown.

An Egotist and a Woman

BY JESSIE LLEWELLYN.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"It was a sad affair," he said.

"Yes?" She regarded him curiously.

So this young man, known to his limited circle of friends as "The Egotist," possessed sympathy.

They sat on opposite sides of the long table in her father's library. At the farther end of the room the grate fire had gone out, but she did not ring; it might encourage him to stay after he had told the story. Perhaps he was not the egotist that people thought him to be. He seemed to feel the tragedy in what he told—else why should he be telling it?

"And you knew him very well?"

she asked.

"Oh, very well—in a business way.

The governor used to rely on him.

Afterwards when I took on the business, I kept him out of kindness, you know. I'm a soft-hearted chap."

"Yes, I know," she interrupted. "He was incompetent? You felt sorry?"

"Not that exactly, oh, no. He was a good man—student and digger—great chemist. I appreciate a digger.

I even took him over to the club for lunch once or twice. He was a natural gentleman. Then, anyway, I'm a humane chap at heart—regular democrat, you know."

"You say he was a very gifted scientist?" she asked quietly.

"He was that. We paid him a bigger salary than any extract house in the world ever paid a chemist. The governor and I always looked out for good men—and paid for them. I can tell a man of brains the minute I lay eyes on him. It's just natural for me to know one on sight—funny isn't it?"

"Very," she replied.

"I'm a queer contradiction," he ruminated, absently crushing some rose petals on the floor with his wide foot.

"I was never before so shocked to hear of a suicide. He had often spoken to me about himself when he had one of those melancholy attacks. I encouraged him, for I'm an easy sort.

Fellow can move me to tears and not half try. You see he had married a girl—well—the good fellow type.

Said he owed it to her after pronounced attentions had made people talk. She told him that. He felt sorry for her—acted the fool as those studious chaps always do, and married her. Now, I—"

"And she?"

"Went to the other extreme. From being too—er—jolly she overdid respectability. Joined women's clubs and things—that sort was the best she could do. Developed into a shrew."

"Do you know what I'd do if I found myself married to a shrew? Oh, I'm

and although he was only a salaried man in the house I actually grew fond of him. We would tell college yarns and I—"

"You were in college together?"

"Not exactly. He had gone in for the German and Russian universities after ages of cramming on this side.

Of course I—with the governor's money—"

"Yes, I know." She swiftly replied and a dark red overspread her face and neck. "You became intimate friends, and—how very sad—he—it was only last week, wasn't it?"

"Committed suicide last week. Took five grains of morphine and was as dead as—er quite dead in no time. I was with him that afternoon. He was down-hearted and I just thought of "The details. It is the details that I cannot—"

"Oh, certainly!" Curiously his face relaxed in a broad smile. He raised his hand in a grand gesture and stroked his small black mustache.

"I just told you the story," he began. "We were speaking earlier in the evening of literary ability. Well,

I wrote a friend of his a complete account of the suicide, and—do you know, it was the most graphic thing

I ever did? The way it impressed me and all makes me believe that I have real literary ability. Funny, isn't it?"

"Very." Her voice sounded strange to both of them. Her arms were held close to her sides and her hands were clenched.

"What's the matter?" he asked again.

Her face was very pale. He wondered stupidly.

"And now," she said in a repressed, monotonous tone, "I will tell you something funnier, even than yourself

I've got to tell!"

Her voice had risen, but she carefully modulated it again.

"For fifteen years you knew him intimately. For fifteen years, I knew him, too. I loved him—always—before his marriage—long before—and afterwards. I love him—now. You see he didn't need you—or anybody

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.
(Special Correspondence.)

A Coal Famine.—Many of the government buildings have only enough coal on hand for present needs, and unless the strike is soon settled and the mines put in operation the heating of Uncle Sam's workshops during the coming winter may become a serious problem. The capitol is in the most serious trouble. Usually contracts are made for furnishing coal to all government departments at the beginning of the fiscal year. In accordance with this custom, bids for furnishing the capitol with coal for the ensuing winter were opened on June 30 last, but because of the fact that the lowest bid was $7.50 and the proposals all contained a "strike clause," to insure the contractors against loss, the bids were rejected, and since then coal for use in the capitol has been bought in the open market. The supply is barely sufficient, however, to last until the first of November and it is predicted that unless the strike is settled within two weeks coal will not be purchas-able in Washington after Sept. 15.

Souvenir Gold Dollars.—The gold dollar, which passed out of circulation some years ago because the government suspended the coinage of this diminutive piece of metal, is to be temporarily reintroduced in 1904. An employee of the bureau of engraving and printing is drawing a design, by direction of Secretary Shaw, for a special "souvenir" one-dollar gold piece in celebration of the Louisiana purchase exposition to be held at St.
Louis. Two issues of the coin will be made. One will bear on its face the portrait of William McKinley and the other that of Thomas Jefferson. The words "Louisiana Purchase Expon-sition," with the dates 1803 and 1903, will appear on the same side. On the reverse side will be engraved an appropriate design.

Rare Book Lost.—An old and rare volume of considerable value has been lost from the congressional library, and two detectives of the local bureau are trying to find it. The book is "Captain Cook's Three Voyages to the Pacific Ocean," published in Boston in 1797. Last Friday August Schauster, a government clerk, took the book to his home by permission.
He was sitting on the veranda of his house reading it and laid it in a chair while he went into the house, and when he returned it was gone. The officers of the library say that it will be very difficult and perhaps impossible to replace the book.

Washington Bereaved.—Washington as the capital city of the United States, has sustained a personal loss in the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan. As chairman of the committee on the District of Columbia he has for several years been virtually the mayor of the city, and his great influence and business ability have been to further the plans for the growth and beautifying of the district.
Having no interest himself in Washington real estate, beyond the ownership of a handsome private residence, and no political ambitions to serve, he has been able to deal with questions affecting the welfare of the district from a purely practical and sensible standpoint.

What We Did For Cuba.—During
the American occupation in Cuba, from 1898 to 1902, according to a statement prepared by the bureau of insurance affairs of the war department, the total revenues collected from all sources were $57,200,000. The expenditures from the revenue during the same period were $52,370,000. The revenues in the fiscal year 1900, the first full year of occupation, were about fourteen and a half million dollars and in 1901 more than fourteen million dollars. "A feature of the expense account in Cuba," the department says, "was occasioned by the condition of the various municipalities, all of which showed large deficits in their annual budgets. In the fiscal year 1899 more than one million dollars was contributed to defray these deficits, and thereafter the schools, police and municipal hospitals and charities were maintained almost entirely at the expense of the insular government. This condition has been very largely overcome, and the majority of the municipalities are now self-sustaining." The buildings erected as barracks for the use of United States troops were put in good repair at the close of the military occupation and turned over to the municipalities as hospitals. The insular bureau statement closes as follows: "In withdrawing from Cuba we left a treasury balance of $635,000 and balances in the hands of collectors and disbursing officers aggregating $1,200,000, constituting an ample working capital for the inauguration of the new republic."

Washington "Bridge of Sighs" Going.—The removal of the "Bridge of Sighs," an iron and wooden structure that for nearly twenty years has spanned Eighth street and served as a means of communication between the upper floors of the General Land Office and the Civil Service Commission, was begun today. The owner of the building in which the Civil Service Commission is quartered also owns the "Bridge of Sighs." Some time ago the Commissioners of the District holding the span to be an eyesore and a nuisance, ordered its removal. The owner in view of the considerable expense involved protested, but to no purpose, and finally solved the difficulty by presenting the bridge to the District. The bridge will be used to span a gulch in Rock Creek Park.

TAKING THE MASCALONCE.

The Proper Method of Trolling for This Water-Wolf.

In trolling for "lunge" the old-fashioned handline and spoon hook may be depended upon, but the method lacks the science which the use of a trolling rod demands. I have done a lot of it, and I prefer to go alone and do my own paddling, or rowing. A turn of the line around the thigh enables you to feel all attacks on the lure while leaving both hands for the paddle or oar; and at the same time the line is where your hand can find it without loss of time. This is important, for the resistance of a heavy fish, aided by the forward motion of the craft, will tau-ten a line to the danger point before you have time for many motions of your hand. When paddling I make fast the paddle by a short cord, so it can safely be dropped at any point of the stroke. When once fast to a good fish I seldom bother about the paddle for turning, as there is a way of swinging a light craft head on to a taut line which is understood by all familiar with canoes and skiffs. An old pair of gloves is no bad protection, for a line sometimes cuts bare hands.

A small fellow may be unceremoniously hauled in hand over hand; a big one must be humored. I believe in keeping at a fish all the time, taking no too pronounced liberties and allowing him none. So long as a firm, even hold be maintained on him, he is doomed, if the hooks are planted where they should be. Anything like jerking should not be allowed at either end of the string, for one stiff jerk may play havoc. Only overexcitement or rotten tackle are responsible for the loss of a well-hooked fish.—From a Matter of Mascalonge, by Edwin Sandys, in Outing.

NEVER OWNED A WATCH.

Mr. Edison has never owned a watch and for the reason as he declares, that of all things he wishes to know least is the time. And herein is no little philosophy. The man who is always looking at the sun is none other than he who does the smallest day's work. Time only drags with him who constantly keeps his eye on the minute hand. Time should only be measured by personal achievements. The truth is, a man who is intensely interested in his work has no thought of time. The day simply means to him an opportunity to accomplish something. The thought does not occur to the busy man that when the day is over he will find rest. Edison's intensely active and inventive life is not cut up into days, weeks months and years. He regards time as a whole, having a definite relationship to his life's work as a whole. He knows no time, nor event, nor epoch that is not period by some personal achievement. With him no time is completed, until his work is finished. We are of the opinion that the better arrangement would have been had there been no division of time. Let the ages be reckoned by the events occurring therein. Why not? How satisfactory it would be to the average woman if the anniversary of her birthday had no data for its reckoning! And the average man would not object to such non-division of time. Under such conditions we could all assume a continuous youth. Forever young. How delightful! Edison has found the only source of perpetual youth. He carries no watch. He only reckons time by heart beats.

WHAT OF THESE EVENINGS.

Who knows anything of these brilliant August evenings? Who has made a study of the evening time? Who thinks of it other than a time to take a nap before going to bed? Last evening here in Northern New Hampshire, was one of the most remarkable both in its brilliancy and in its varied aspect of earth and sky. The moon at its full came up out of that far eastern horizon with no sign of cloud in touch, so that the entire valley of the Ossipees was flooded with softened light. As the moon advanced higher in the heavens, great masses of silver-lined clouds came sailing along with all the grace and majesty of ocean steamers, while the mountains below looked up in quiet admiration. It was such an evening of which poets delight to write. It was such an one as Bryant unquestionably had in mind when he wrote, "That silent moon, that silent moon, Carreering now through cloudless skies;

Ah, who shall tell what varied scenes Have passed beneath her placid eye Since first to light this wayward earth She walked in tranquil beauty forth?" If you would see the world in all its varied and transcendent beauty, do not leave out of your reckoning the evening time. Take in the silvery light of the moon, as well as the more brilliant effulgence of the day, knowing that while "day unto day uttereth speed," "night unto night showeth knowledge."

THE LIVING WORD.

The living word is nothing other than the heart throb of a live writer. A dead paragraph invariably has a corpse behind it. To give life one must have first been begotten himself. The printed column goes for naught unless it is all aglow with the thought to be expressed. If the writer is half asleep one may be sure that his readers will fall asleep. That letter from a friend only counts, that has in it the heart and soul of the friend. We must somehow get in touch one with another before we can communicate life. There are no distances so infinite as those existing between dead men. There is no community of feeling in a graveyard. So what we need that we may well do our work is to be made alive. The poor widow's son is not the only man who should be resurrected. Why is it that so many men and women go moving about snail-like in their daily round of duties? It is no wonder that the clergyman so frequently has audiences in a dull stupor. It is not a singular happening that the journalist has readers dozing over his published columns. The unfortunate fact is the most of us mope when we should be making our way with a 2.40 gait.

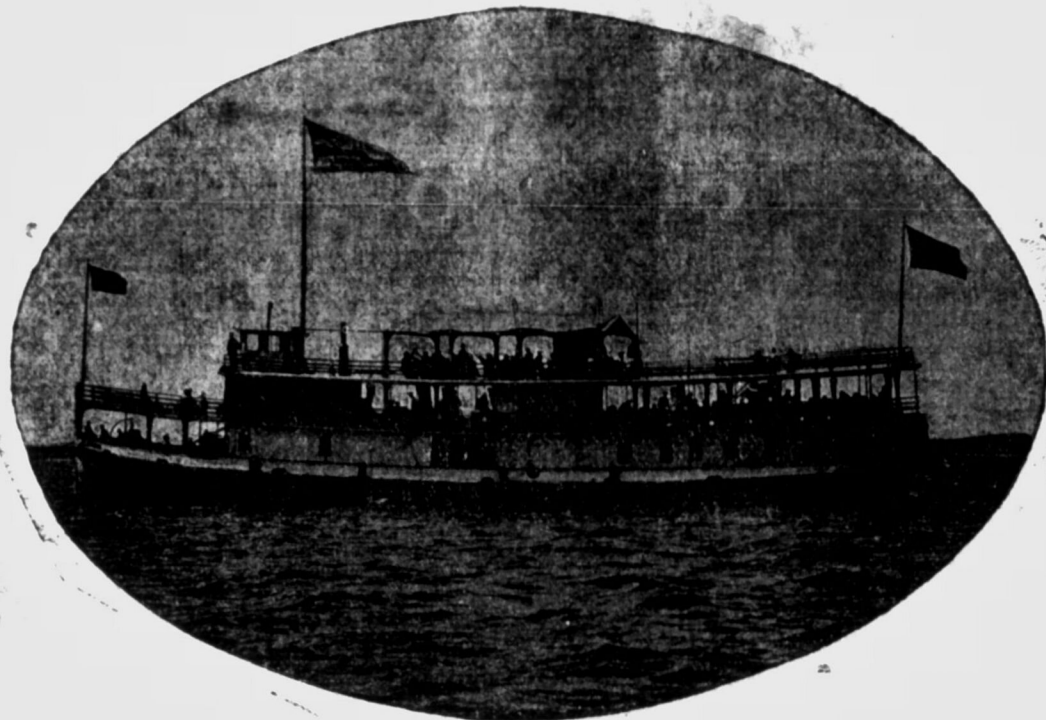

O, for a live man! His mistakes and blunders may be readily excused if only he will show signs of life.

Imagine, if you can, a live-stock train 16 7-8 miles long—numbering 2,397 cars and containing 34,785 head of cattle, 38,456 hogs and 22,234 sheep and you will have some idea of the record-breaking day for receipts at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, on Wednesday, July 24, 1901. It was the biggest day ever known in the history of this big live-stock mart.

"WAVERLEY DAY," FRIDAY, AUGUST 29

—ON THE—

BOSTON FLOATING HOSPITAL

As a result of an earnest and conscientious effort by the following ten little girls of Waverley: Blanche A. Benton, Pres.; Gladys Sherman, Vice-Pres.; Ray Harris, Treas.; Stella Banks, Sec'y; Luella Bowden, Ruth Barnes, Inez Smith, Hazel Trowbridge, Elizabeth Harris and Mary Scott. Friday, Aug. 29, has been set apart as "Ten Little Girls of Waverley Day" as a special "named trip" day of the Boston Floating hospital.

The barge will leave City Wharf, South Ferry at 9.30 a. m., and returning arrive at the wharf at 4 p. m.

Patients are sent by physicians of Greater Boston, on special certificates furnished by the hospital, and are examined on entrance and assigned to the proper wards, according to the nature of their disease. Here they are further examined by the doctors and nurse in charge, the proper treatment determined, and a history of the case commenced. The foods and medicines are prepared and administered in accordance with the needs of each individual case, and the course is in all respects similar to that of all other regular hospitals. In addition the mothers are given a mid-day meal, and the well children who are permitted because they cannot be left at home are given food also, and taken care of in a kindergarten where they are amused and instructed, thus avoiding the noise which would disturb the sick children. The mothers are also given an opportunity to see the different kinds of food prepared, and instructed in the best methods of preparing and keeping modified milk, the proper methods of caring for their babies, and such other points as may be valuable. The sicker children are kept in the permanent wards until recovery and the mothers visit them daily, those not so sick are permitted to return on certificate furnished. Nothing that can be written is adequately descriptive of the work; the system and mechanism by which all this is possible. We only hope that the trip next Friday may be but the first of a series of similarly beneficial enterprises to be undertaken and executed by this up-to-date and progressive club of little workers. The $100 necessary to give this trip for 60 children was raised at a fair held in the early summer in Waverley hall.

The Nobleman and Birdy's arrest. In unfolding the plot some realistic and beautiful scenic pictures are shown that are particularly interesting to persons who have never visited New York, and inasmuch as they depict scenes made familiar to nearly everybody by the press of the country.

Mr. Gilmore will be heard in several of his latest songs. There will be matinees on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturdays as usual.

Better be alone than be in bad company.—Spanish proverb.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE. Mr. Barney Gilmore, in Kidnapped in New York.

Next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House will be the popular young Irish romantic actor, Mr. Barney Gilmore, in Howard Hall's best melodrama, "Kidnapped in New York." The celebrated Baby Clark kidnapping case in the Metropolis furnishes some incidents and scenes for this play and vividly represents phases of life in Manhattan borough as it really is. The dominant element in Mr. Hall's work is heart interest, and this appeals forcibly to fathers, mothers and their children.

John Brandon, treasurer of the Manhattan Boat club, is convicted and serves time for a crime of which he is innocent, namely, stealing $11,000 from the club's safe. Mary, his daughter, is left penniless, but Mr. Doly (Mr. Gilmore's character) aids her because he loves her. Under the name of Mary Menton she becomes the governess of Elsie, a child of John Clark, a wealthy man living on the Hudson river. Signor Maziotte, a villainous nobleman who knows the Brandons, visits Clark and discovers Mary. He reveals her identity and she is discharged. Then he and his accomplice, known as "Birdy" Holden, kidnap Baby Elsie in Central park, where they are seen by Dooley disguised as a laborer.

Finally, after a long search, Dooley, disguised as a vander, discovers the nobleman, and Elsie in a kidnapper's "den" on the West side, rescues the child and returns her to her father. The Italian vainly tries to fasten the crime on Dooley. The story ends with the betrothal of Mary and Dooley, and
